FRIDAY, MAY 17, 1745.

Extract of a Private Letter from the Hague, dated May 21, 1745.

'THERE want not ſome People here, who ſeem to be of Opinion, that the late Check receiv'd by the Army of the Allies in Flanders, ſhould incline us to turn our Thoughts once more upon what has been ſo often talk'd of, viz. a Neutrality for Flanders; to which, we are told, the French Court is not ſtill in any Degree averſe. This Point, whether debated elſewhere or not, I cannot but ſure I am, that in our Coffee-Houſes it has been thoroughly canvaſs'd; and my Sentiment is, nor am I ſingular therein, that the Coffee-Houſe Politicians here argue as ſenſibly as ſome Privy-Counſellors. You will be able to judge of this as well as I, when I repeat to you what was ſaid by one of theſe Orators upon this Occaſion; but, at the ſame time, I muſt beg you underſtand, that this Gentleman is ſo intimate with Mr. V. H. that ſome People call him his Echo.

I wonder, ſaid he, how the Projects of a Neutrality could ever be reliſh'd by honeſt People, to whom it had been ſo liberal as to allow an ordinary Proportion of Common Senſe. For what is a Neutrality? Is not plainly Polyphemus's Bargain; a Sort of temporary Convention made by a Gigantick Power, to eat the little Power ſhe makes it with laſt; by which Stipulation, ſhe acquires the Capacity of keeping, or breaking her Word? Is this a Propoſition fit to be accepted by ſuch as know their own Intereſts, and mind them? Or is it what a good Patriot would willingly ſee take Place, if he had, what he never can have, an ample Security that ſuch a Treaty would be kept? No certainly, to think of ſuch a Neutrality, is to treat an Abſurdity, as if we ſhould dream of making Terms with the Plague, or of capitulating with Death, not to repair or improve our Dykes? Every body can ſee the Folly of this; and every body may ſee the Weakneſs of the other.

Is there one of our new Patriots that will affirm the Power of this Republick to be either greater, or equal, to that of the Houſe of Bourbon? Or is there any one ſo wiſe, as to be able to aſſign the Height which the Power of that Houſe may grow? Or ſo penetrating a Judgment, as to fix the Bounds of their Ambition? If there be; Why does he not ſpeak, and ſave us out of our Pain? Let him Prophecy, and work Miracles; and then poſſibly we may hear him. But in the mean time, let us be content to be as wiſe as our Anceſtors; and to make uſe of the common Maxims of Prudence for our Preſervation. Let us remember, that if the Houſe of Bourbon has been growing in Power for a Century paſt; and if, with every Acceſſion of Power, her Thirſt of Power has grown daily greater and greater, we are in danger of ſuffering by her Ambition, unleſs we are aſſiſted by our Neighbours; and that it is the moſt unlikely Thing in the World that they ſhould aſſiſt us, if we refuſe to aſſiſt them; or wilfully ſhut our Eyes to our own Danger.

If we, by accepting a Neutrality, ſhould tie up our Hands, will it put an End to the War? No body can ſay that; for France can have no Reaſon to grant us a Neutrality, but that ſhe may be at Liberty to purſue it elſewhere with greater Vigour; and if with greater Vigour, very probably, with greater Succeſs; and what muſt the Conſequence of this Succeſs be, but the aggrandizing her Power, already too great; and the weakning thoſe from whom, if we are ever reliev'd, we muſt demand, and be ſaved by their aſſiſtance? But with what Face demand it, after accepting ſuch a Neutrality? With what Probability hope it ſhould prove effectual, when thus weaken'd, and taken'd by our Conſent? But this, ſay ſome, are but abſtract Reaſonings: Well then, would you appeal to Experience, to Experience you ſhall go.

When the War broke out in Germany, about the Austrian Succeſſion, with which, to be ſure, thoſe Princes and States had at leaſt as much to do as we; there were ſome of them, who in their great Wiſdom, accepted of a Neutrality; and what they got by that Neutrality, the Remonſtrances of the Circles of Swabia and Franchonia, to the late Emperor, Charles XII. have told us; and the Circles of the Rhine, would tell us much more ——— if they durſt. Thus you ſee by Experience, what are the Fruits of Neutralities; and you know whoſe Advice it was to judge of Trees by their Fruits. The Circles I firſt mentioned, after ſuffering all the Miſchiefs of War, for fear of engaging in a War, are now aſſembling their Forces; and in a few Months Time muſt engage in a War, to retrieve that Peace which had never been loſt, if they had arm'd in Purſuance to their Engagements, and from a juſt Reſpect to their own Intereſt at firſt.

'But we have lately received a Check, a mighty Buſineſs indeed! What think you of the Checks that France has received in Bohemia, Bavaria, in Italy, and on the Rhine, yet ſhe perſiſts in purſuing the Meaſures dictated by her Luſt of Power. Is the Rage of Ambition ſo ſtrong; and ſhall we think it reaſonable that the Spirit of Liberty ſhould be ſo weak? What can the Conſequences of theſe Things be? Without Witchcraft or Inſpiration, we may pronounce, that they will be either precarious Freedom, or downright Slavery. The Queſtion then is reduced to this ſhort Iſſue; Whether we will venture ſomething to preſerve all; or whether we will looſe all To-morrow rather than To-day? A Thouſand Arts may be practiſed to ſet the Caſe in other Lights; but this is the Light in which we ought to conſider it, if we mean to purſue our own Intereſt, and to do for our Poſterity what our Anceſtors did for us.'

HOME PORTS.

A SPECIFICK in FEVERS is now offer'd to the PUBLICK,

WHICH infallibly removes the moſt violent Fever, if taken at the Beginning, without Bleeding, Vomiting, Bliſtering, the Teſtacea, Diaphoreticks, Clyſters, or Juleps of any Kind, and that generally in one Day, but never fails in two or three at fartheſt. This is truly a Specifick, becauſe it certainly cures the Diſorder without any viſible Operation. It has no diſagreeable Taſte, neither does it cauſe the leaſt Nauſea or Sickneſs, or diſorder the Body any Way. It's an exceeding good Remedy alſo in Colds, (which too often bring on a Fever) and has cured ſeveral very bad ones at once or twice taking.

The great Uſefulneſs of ſuch a Remedy (which has never before been offer'd to the Publick) is evident from the London Bills of Mortality, according to which, no leſs than 40,855 Perſons have died of Fevers within the laſt Ten Years; which, one Year with another, is 4000 a Year, and upwards: But as this Remedy comes in Practice, 'tis not doubted but the Number under that Head, in future Bills, will proportionably decreaſe.

It is very proper for Gentlemen to take to Sea, as it will retain its Virtue many Years if kept dry; and be found of infinite Service in hot Climates.

Sold at Mr. Whitridge's, Bookſeller, the Corner of the Royal Exchange and Caſtle-Alley in Cornhill; and at Mr. Winbuſh's Pamphlet Shop, next the Admiralty Coffee Houſe, near Charing Croſs. Price 2 s. 6 d.

Now on SALE.
